

Key Club throws Christmas party, tours hospital

Thursday, February 2, 2012
Sanford News Fosters.com

SANFORD — Members of the Sanford High School Key Club wrapped up a busy year of community service with two special activities.

In December, ten Key Club members helped throw a festive Christmas party for several Waban clients at the Life Works building in Sanford. Members guided clients in creating several arts and crafts projects for the party, and then assisted in the festivities.

Also last month, 20 members took a trip to the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute (KPTI) in Boston, Massachusetts, to participate in their open house. They toured the facility and had the chance to learn about, and to observe first-hand, the wonderful work the hospital does. They were joined by several other Key Club groups from Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

courtesy photo SHS students Natalie Dionne, left, and Emily Bordeau and Kiwanians David Joy and Caren Martineau take a break from bowling at Bowl-A-Rama during a recent outing of the Key Club and the Kiwanis Club.

To start 2012, Key Clubbers joined Sanford Kiwanis members at Bowl-A-Rama for a night of fun. It was a great opportunity for the two clubs to meet one another, share memories of the previous year and set their goals for the new year.

Key Club, with 5,000 schools in 30 countries, is one of the oldest student-led high school clubs in the world. The Club has been helping students experience the rewards of community service for more than 80 years. Currently, there are more than 260,000 members across the globe that participate in Key Club each year.

courtesy photo Members of Sanford High School's Key Club visit the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute in Boston.